

SMU: "You have been without water living for seven years?"

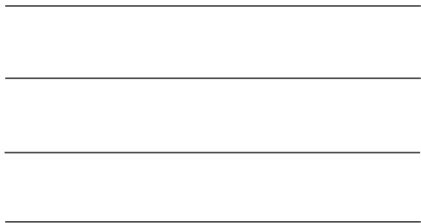

Inhabitant:

"Without electricity. We did have water at alternate intervals. We had a generator that worked by the hour. When it worked at all. Because we were 4 to 5 families, we had to take turns filling in petrol. The problem here is the hills: Water reaches the houses at the bottom, but not the ones at the top. That's the thing. So we had to agree on who would take turns filling up the tank with a rubber hosepipe and one or two little motors."
